

BelieversFlow — Full Pitch Document

A Christian task manager and spiritual growth tracker. Built with faith, for believers.

1. Problem Definition

The Spiritual-Productivity Gap

Christians today face a unique challenge: existing productivity tools are secular by design. They optimize for output, efficiency, and business metrics — not for spiritual growth, prayer discipline, or scripture engagement.

Key problems observed:

| Problem                            | Evidence                                                                                                              |
|------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| No integrated faith tools          | Christians toggle between a task app (Todoist, TickTick) and a Bible app (YouVersion) with no connection between them |
| Prayer discipline is hard to build | No tool tracks prayer consistency or motivates daily quiet time                                                       |
| Bible reading lacks                |                                                                                                                       |

3. Technical Execution

Architecture

4. User Experience

Design Philosophy

"Delightful simplicity with spiritual depth."

The UX is designed around three principles:

- Warmth: Gold gradients, purple accents, rounded cards, emoji-rich interface
- Focus: Each view has one primary action — add task, log prayer, read chapter, write journal
- Encouragement: Positive reinforcement at every interaction (toasts, streak counters, progress bars)
